

5 Overlooked Vulnerabilities Looters Look For (And How to Fix Them in 1 Hour)

A free checklist walking through the blind spots burglars and looters scout before targeting a home — and simple, low-cost fixes for each one.

Why Standard Alarm Systems Fail When You Need Them Most

Most home security depends on a working power grid and internet connection. During blackouts, storms, or civil unrest — exactly when break-ins spike — those systems go dark. Looters know this, and they specifically target homes whose only protection is a camera that stopped recording the moment the power cut out.

A Layered System Built on Real Field Experience

The kit stacks multiple independent layers: perimeter tripwire alerts, motion-activated sensors, an alarmed door jammer that works on any door, and a solar-powered floodlight that needs no outlet. Each layer buys you time and sends a clear signal that your home isn't an easy target.

Designed for Preppers, Homeowners, and Anyone Who Values Real Protection

You don't need a bunker mentality to want a home that can defend itself when the usual safety nets disappear. This system installs in under an hour, needs no subscription, and keeps working exactly when powered systems don't.
